Enough Holidays To Go Around

The United States, being a nation of honorable men, will observe all truces that can be arranged in Viet Nam.

Whether the South Vietnamese, the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong will prove equally honorable is a matter of justifiable doubt. But there is hope they will, because they have a powerful incentive.

Their incentive is expediency. They are on their native soil. Any arrangement that permits them to use their non-violent powers of persuasion is to their advantage. They have everything to gain, nothing to lose in a long truce. They are acutely aware of the handicap of the United States in this respect. Its powers of persuasion are limited. Its persuaders are of a different race, with strange ways of talking, eating, reasoning, and working.

The only positive advantage they can claim is willingness to spend money. This advantage is not to be dismissed lightly.

If the United States could be deprived of its irreconcilable enmity for Communism, U.S. wealth might be poured into Viet Nam for decades to come without complications. Vietnamese politicians of varying political in the United States get along. It is called a "modus vivendi." It is what happens when people who don't like one another figure out how to live together. They find a "way of living." A "way of living" beats fighting. It isn't ideal, but it's better than dving. Every nation that aspires to have government by popular consent must learn how to do it. It's never easy.

The learning usually starts with a bloody civil war. When the blood-letting has exhausted everybody, a "modus vivendi" is found. It can take many different forms. It can be an armed truce. It can be an endless political donnybrook. It can be a state of perennial civil chaos

Ultimately, if all goes well, it can be what political scientists call the "two-party system," meaning there always will be an opposition waiting in the wings to knock off the ruling clique if it stubs its toe or if the public tires of the party in power.

There may not be enough holidays to go around in Viet Nam. But if enough can be found to give combatants the idea it is more fun to fume than fight, the first step toward deliberative government will have been taken. It's an outside chance, but it would beat

Let's Close The Season!

A lady reader has made a suggestion that would eliminate the hunting menace even better than a suggestion this newspaper has been making. Our suggestion is to eliminate by law all hunting in what are defined in U.S. census tracts as "metropolitan areas. A metropolitan area is the modern definition of what used to be called a "city," before urban sprawl changed the nature of cities. It is an area in which people live close together, though many and sometimes most of them do not live inside the limits of a municipality.

Yet, hunters are permitted to shoot guns outside the limits of a municipality, though they may be in the midst of densely populated suburbs. Only municipalities are forbidden ter-

If a suburbanite comes into a city with a gun and shoots it, he is subject to arrest and punishment. But if a city resident comes into the suburbs and bangs away at everything that moves or is theoretically edible and legal to kill, he is a sportsman.

Our reader (a suburbanite) says we need a law that will require sportsmen to hunt only on perty officially set aside by the government and stocked for that purpose. Game wardens, the readers says, then could do their jobs properly. Suburbanites would be protected. So would tame rabbits, among other things.

It was the wanton slaughtering of a tame tabbit in the reader's back yard that gave her the idea of forbidding hunting everywhere, except on officially created hunting preserves. We assume private hunting preserves still would be permitted.

The reader's idea is sound. By the time state lawmakers had staked out official preserves, where no one would have any objections to being shot at, they would understand why the time is long overdue to bar hunting in metropolitan areas. Everybody would understand by that time why a modern city only begins to be the municipality at its core.

A Resolution

Being able to generate little enthusiasm for New Year's resolutions, we generally steer clear of such declarations, in the belief that they are made only to be broken.

There is one, however, that we would like to suggest for 1966 to law enforcement agencies and judicial authorities in the Northern Panhandle area of West Virginia.

Simply stated, it would read: "Resolved, that bigger, better and more permanent padlocks be slapped on all illegal liquor and gambling establishments along Hancock County's 'Strip.'

No Honeymoon Is Forever

Among the many things that proved puzzling in an inordinately puzzling year was the reported end of President Johnson's honeymoons with the labor unions and big business.

The big business honeymoon was over, declared honeymoon experts, when the Johnson administration said it would shuck off some of its stockpiled aluminum if the aluminum industry raised prices.

That did it, announced the experts. Big business never would feel honeymoonish again about any chief executive who refused to hold still for a price boost of a commodity the government had been stockpiling to help market conditions.

The labor unions realized the honeymoon was over when the Democrats failed to repeal Section 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act. Since then, it is said, the head unionist, George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, hasn't been consulted as much as he thinks he should be.

President Johnson's honeymoon with the South, which he went on in 1960 when he was John F. Kennedy's political contact in that part of the country, ended when the South found out the Kennedy administration and subsequently the Johnson administration intended to uphold the civil rights of Negroes.

His honeymoon with anti-Viet Nam war people ended after his election in 1964 when he switched his position about embroiling the United States in a war that might find American fighting man facing millions of Chinese, as had happened under a Democratic predecessor, Harry Truman.

His honeymoon with dog lovers cooled when he held those beagles by the ears. His honeymoon with French chefs and admirers of French chefs and admirers of French cooking ended when he let it be known he preferred Texas cooks and Texas cooking and the French chef in the White House turned in his white hat. His honeymoon with all admirers of modesty ended when he showed photographers his scar from the gall bladder operation.

It adds up to one hard fact about the presidency: The occupant of the office begins to earn his salary when all the honeymoons are over and he has had to say no at least once

America has a new parlor game

Correction: American has a new twist to an old parlor game.

Kissing.

People have been kissing in parlors since there were parlors. It was serious business. Marriage was the next step.

That was the old parlor game. In the new game, kissing doesn't mean anything. It is as perfunctory as a handshake. But for old-time Boy Scouts brought up to believe marriage was the next step kissing never can be perfunctory. I ran into a spatter of smooching this Christmas that shook me up. It also laid me low. I came out of this ordeal by osculation with a bad cold, first I've had for years. There's a connection

I wasn't one of the main participants in the bussing. But even as an innocent bystander I got into more cheek-to-cheek situations than a French general handing out medals for gallantry in action. The technique, I learned, is similar to that employed by Frenchmen but nothing like that employed by Frenchwomen. The kisser makes a head-on approach to the kissee, puckers up, leans forward from the waist as if to precipitate a head-on collision, then swerves aside at the last instant. This game of esculatory chicken is not unlike highway chicker in which one or both parties may be killed. What happened to me was a bad cold. I zigged when I should have zagged and the lady who started the action zagged when she should have zigged and this brought us tooth to tooth-and that's how the cold virus bridged the gap.

It was like the Asians crossing the land bridge that once closed Bering Straits. There could be no other explanation for the presence in North America of people who must have come from

Before I go out socially again, I must practice zigging and zagging. Theoretically, the lady makes the first move, which cues in the gentleman as to which cheek he is supposed to smack. Right up to the last split second, he must remain uncommitted, not knowing whether the lady is right-cheeked or left-cheeked.

Some ladies are not expected to swerve but to face the situation head-on. These are ladies who leave nothing to doubt. They know what to expect and what is expected. They are not perfunctory

They were standout performers in the old parlor game of kissing. Nothing ever was perfunctory for these dolls. Watching them go through the motions of osculatory chicken is sad-like watching some great athlete of yesterday playing shuffleboard

In the old days if they had got that close to a member of the opposite sex wedding bells would have been next. Or breach of affection.

The Chink In His Armor

Reuther Raps Union's Elders

By Victor Riesel

Ponce de Leon, who made his fortune in Puerto Rico, should have abandoned his quest for that magic fountain and should have searched for the labor movement instead.

It's the only place a man is middle-aged at 60. And Walter Reuther, now going on 59, has been angered by the council of elders.

The older men's power "structure" is removing much of labor's "vitality," he believes. And furthermore, he thinks they are paid too much and should go to work for the Victor Riesel big corporations if they want big money Mr. Reuther, the Hubert Humphrey of American labor, never is one to leave unvocalized the matters which press on his conscience, his mind and his heart

With the poor and posterity in mind the other day, he criticized sharply his nominal leader, George Meany, Mr. Labor, for accepting a $25,000-a-year raise at the national labor con-

IN AN INTERVIEW the Detroit redhead was asked if he approved of this escalation which brought the AFL-CIO president's annual stipend

Mr. Reuther retorted that he did not approve. This was too much money for a labor leader, he asserted. If anyone wants to move into such brackets, he should move into industry or a corporation such as General Motors.

Why had he, Reuther, as a member of labor's high council, voted for the increase? The auto union chief replied that he had not wanted his colleagues to misunderstand his motive. So he made it unanimous. As he continued, Mr. Reuther spoke more in sorrow than in anger. He deplored the lack of militancy exhibited at the recent national AFL-CIO convention. He called for the unionization of the unorganized. Later, in another interview with an NBC newsman, Mr. Reuther was even

"THE STRUCTURE of the labor movement." said Reuther, "it seems to me, has removed much of the vitality of the leadership we ought to be getting.

"Frankly, at the local union level we get young and middle-aged leaders who want to do things, but when we move up in the structure we find that there are things in the institution which sort of bind us in, and I think we've had this reflected in this convention.

"It means that the older people and the middle-aged people get in the battle, think of the great accomplishments of the past, but somehow or other don't quite seem to focus this in on the new labor movement, on the possibility of organizing the white collar, sub-professional, technical and, at the other end of the stratum, the working poor.

"And these people must be organized, and the leadership must come from these ranks. We've got to devise the way to do it.'

IF MR. REUTHER means what he says, then 1966 will be a hectic and dramatic year. He is not a man to move without battle plans or poor totals exactly 4.5 million heads of households who earn less than $3,000 a year

They work for laundries and hotels and on farms and in the vineyards. If they are too impecunious to pay dues, he is willing to give them union books and subsidize their dues. Just so long as they are willing to join the labor movement in further battles.

"Unions are not using their financial resources adequately enough to organize new members," he said recently. " . . some labor leaders measure success by the size of the union's bankroll. We have to get the money out of mothballs, and put it to work organizing new members."

If Reuther means what he says, if he pours it on by pouring out the many millions of dollars he has available, those of us still in our submiddle age could well relive the labor turbulence of the late '30s

EDITOR OF THE REVIEW

A few years ago I was ridiculed by many for trusting our youth on Halloween by leaving treats on my back porch for youngsters who might call on us for their trick or treat, as we were not going to be home on that particular night

We were so happy when we returned home to see that we had many Halloween visitors and were surprised to see that many of our treats were left for others who might come along and would expect a treat. We had so much confidence in our neighborhood youngsters at that time that I wrote a letter to The Review regarding the honesty of the children and people who go calling on Halloween.

Now my faith in these people is not quite as strong, because somebody took the light bulbs from my outside Christmas tree-20 of them. Waiting Game

By David Lawrence

U.S. Remains Patient On Truce

The truce in Viet Nam was violated by the North Vietnamese but whether by design or accident isn't clear as yet. The United States prefers to go on the assumption that the violation was unintentional

If the Communists, including the Viet Cong, aren't skillful in avoiding unfavorable public impressions, the United States sees an opportunity to convince the world that it is being patient under the most exasperating circumstances in the hope of getting the other side to talk peace. It's being assumed in Washington, for in- David Lawrence stance, that the violations of the truce on Christmas day were due either to faulty communication between the Hanoi government and the guerrillas in accessible locations, or that communication between the North Vietnamese and their masters in Peking is slow and clumsy and needs time for clarification. Americans generally do not realize that red tape in the leadership committees of the Communists can often delay decisions. Nor is discipline easy to apply in the field during guerrilla warfare.

Meanwhile, the United States is, in effect, telling the world that it wants to extend the truce and would like to arrange some kind of armistice out of which peace talks could develop. The attacks on American forces since Christmas day have not caused any stepped-up warfare. Retaliation is being confined instead to defense tactics in the areas where the assaults occur.

THE REAL TEST of whether the war should be resumed on a full-scale basis will come when something happens that necessitates the bombing of military installations in North Viet Nam. The failure to carry on vigorously in the interim may be hard to bear, but the United States government sees in the long run some benefits from a psychological standpoint. If the war should be renewed, the whole world will have had a dramatic manifestation of America's forbearance and sincere desire to bring the war to a peaceful conclusion.

So Peking is up against a serious decision. It it gives the word to its subservient ally in North Viet Nam to return to the fighting on an aggressive basis, the inevitable result will be a change in world opinion. It will have been demonstrated that the United States went to the limit of actually prolonging the Christmas truce in an effort to get negotiations going.

The Communist side will be shown to have disregarded all offers of peace and to be in terested solely in prolonging the war. Under such circumstances, the United States would be able to point out that it had no other choice but to step up the bombing raids.

INCIDENTALLY, quite a debate has been going on inside the government, with the military men arguing that larger armies of ground troops aren't so necessary today as a concerted attack by air on North Viet Nam bases and installations. If such raids are ordered, the Communists will sooner or later be compelled to undertake peace talks. So they might as well take advantage of the Christmas truce dialogue, which they themselves initiated, and try to work out a formal armistice that could stop the fighting while the pow-wowing goes on indefinitely.

Nothing is lost strategically by the United States in the effort to get the Communists to extend the truce into some kind of formal ceasefire while peace talks are held. The United States can employ its air power just as effectively at one time as another. So it's a publicrelations problem for each side. The North Vietnamese and Chinese Communists have to make up their minds whether they want a long war or will take advantage of the truce talks to bring about a real cease-fire.

THE UNITED STATES, if forced to go ahead with the war, will be able to tell the people of the world that it had no alternative. Also, when Congress assembles, a request may be made for authorization to carry on an even more extensive military action and a blockade of the ports through which North Viet Nam now is getting its supplies. Unless the Communists have lost all sense of what is practical and want to risk heavy destruction and gain nothing by it, they may yet find some way to join in a move to put into effect an armistice.

Within the general fund, the legislation provides $3,320 as the city's share of Phase 2 of the contract for preparation for a city "master plan." The funds, requested by the City Planning Commission, will be paid to the firm of Carroll V. Hill and Associates of Pittsburgh and Columbus, the concern drawing up the "master plan" under contract with the city.

The allocation represents onethird of the cost of Phase 2, with the federal government picking up the tab for the remainder.

Commenting on the allocation for the "master plan," Councilmen William Rea and Donald Hancock praised the City Planning Commission and its work.

'I know of the work of the commission, having formerly served three years on it," Rea said. "I feel it is doing an outstanding job and should be supported by all public officials and Hancock pointed out the members "work without pay," and added: "They're doing a wonderful job, in my opinion.

We've made all our resolutions.

And every one is aimed at making A&P a better place to shop in 1966... to make every A&P customer understand what we mean when we say: "WE CARE...ABOUT YOU."

Now, about that resolution we'd like you to make-as a favor to us would you resolve to test-shop A&P (get a jump on the New Year-start this week.)

You may discover you've done yourself a favor. You're sure to discover we really do care...about you.

Is this a good reason for shopping A&P? It's one of many.

-Junior Editors Quiz on PEARLS

QUESTION: How are pearls formed?

* * ANSWER: Many of the simple animals called molluskssuch as the clam, oyster and mussel-have a pair of hard shells to protect their soft, defenseless bodies. To make these shells smooth on the inside, the animal secrets a substance called nacre, which has a soft shine. The body of the mollusk is very sensitive to any foreign matter like a grain of sand, which may work inside its shell. When this happens, the covering of the animal or mantle surrounds the foreign object with nacre. More and more is added until a round shape is made, which finally gets so large that it breaks off at its base and exists as a loose ball. Such balls may be found inside many mollusk shells; but only the ones inside one special oyster, the pearl oyster, are pearls. This is because the crystal structure of the nacre in this oyster differs from others. By its construction it reflects delicate rainbow colors to create a beautiful luminous effect. To find such pearls, many oysters must be opened on a pearling ship. When a fine pearl shows up, it is a big moment, for these gems have a high value if of perfect color and shape.

FOR YOU TO DO: Look in a jeweler's window and see if you can find real pearls shown there. Notice their wonderful depth and iridescence. Artificial pearls may be beautiful, but they lack that subtle inner fire.

Hans Janzen of St. Catherines, Ont., wins today's combined prize of Compton's Illustrated Science Dictionary plus $10 cash for this question. Mail yours on a postcard to Junior Editors in care of The Review.
